THE TROOPS ARE READY TO MOVE . . .

This should be the season the Cincinnati Royals begin their ascent up the Western Division ladder. Everything from the Royals' side of the National Basketball Association fence points to better things this winter, believes Coach Tom Marshall.

There are quite a few reasons for the Royals to make their "move" this season. A group of Cincy cagers, rookies last year, now have an important season of experience under their belts. Some of the veterans have improved. Three key trades are expected to bolster the team.

"Old Reliables" Jack Twyman and Dave Piontek are once again the experience nucleus of the club. Twyman's offensive play is widely known. Piontek had his best pro season last winter but looks to much better things during 1959-60.

Rookie seasons have brought out the pro talents of such Royals as guard Arlen (Bucky) Bockhorn, forwards Jim Palmer and Larry Staverman and center Wayne (Goose) Embry. Phil Rollins, another guard, started his rookie year with Philadelphia but soon after was traded to the Royals.

Cincinnati gained guard Med Park's services from St. Louis midway through last season and his smart, steady play is expected to provide floor generalship, one weakness in last winter's club. Win Wilfong, another guard, followed Park from the Hawks this summer and his aggressiveness will give the Royals spark in that phase of the game.

Another key off-season trade was the one which brought 6'10" Phil Jordon, a center, from Detroit. "Flip" had his best pro season last winter and there is no reason not to expect continued improvement as a Royal.

Jordon will share pivot play with Embry, giving Cincy the best one-two center punch in the Western Division and perhaps in the entire NBA. Both are rugged around the boards. Embry's rebounding could cause nightmares and Jordon's defense on around-the-basket shots can prove quite bothersome to opponents.

The only rookie on this year's edition of the Royals is 6'3" Wayne Stevens, one-time University of Cincinnati rebound star. The jumping-jack shined in pre-season workouts with improving defense, good outside shooting and some unusual aggressiveness. "Steve" was the Royals' 11th player in pre-season workouts but could move out a veteran by the Dec. 15th cutdown date.

Position by position, the Royals figure to be better this year. As a result, they should be a much better team. True, most of the NBA teams have improved over last year so the Cincy lads could find the going a bit tougher this season.

During the 1958-59 campaign, the Royals lost three games by one point apiece, another game by two points, one by three points, two games in overtimes, and six games by a total of seven points.

Tom Marshall feels his troops are ready to "move" this winter. He and his cagers have every confidence the convoy will get underway in the victory columns.

LEADER OF OUR TROOPS

History reveals young leaders in combat who have performed miracles with their burdens of responsibility. Cincinnati's Royals hope they have their version of such a young leader in Tom Marshall.

Twenty-eight year old Tom took over the coaching reins of the Royals after 18 games had passed last season. Before donning coaching togs of a suit and tie, Tom was both a forward and guard with a Royal team that won but three of those 18 games!

The Tennessee native directed his team to 16 wins and 38 losses the rest of the 1958-59 season. Record-wise, his first coaching stint wasn't impressive. Royal officials, however, heaped loads of praise on Tom for a job "well done" with the rookie-loaded club.

For one thing, they gave him credit for proving that 6'8" Wayne Embry, the 240-pound former Miami University of Ohio star, was pro material. Until Marshall took over the Royals, Wayne had seen only spotty service.

After Marshall's coaching initiation, a 105-81 defeat by St. Louis at New York, quiet-spoken Tom was dejected. Close observers were quick to note Embry's 18 points and 17 rebounds in 26 minutes of play. "You proved tonight Wayne Embry could play in the pros!" one friend told Tom.

Youngest coach in the league, Marshall is a 6'4", 215-pound bachelor who became a basketball headline back in his home state and at Western Kentucky State College. He was an All-State scholastic choice at Mt. Juliet, Tenn. In three varsity seasons at Western Kentucky, he averaged over 20 points a game.

He set state collegiate career and one-season records under renowned Coach Eddie Diddle. His senior year saw Tom average 25 points a game in 33 outings, notching another WK record. He majored in physical education and minored in geography at college.

Tom started his pro career in 1954 with the Rochester Royals. He posted an 8.0 point average in 72 games his first season, making 44 percent of his field goal shots.

Marshall's pro career was interrupted by 21 months' Army service at Fort Sam Houston, Tex. with the Medics. He returned to the Royals in the middle of the 1956 season. He came to Cincy in 1957 when the club's franchise was moved here.

About the middle of the Royals' first campaign here, Tom was sold to Detroit. Later the same season, he was returned to Cincinnati which was both to his and local fans' liking.

One of five sons and three daughters, Tom's parents still live at Mt. Juliet. He is a Baptist. Soft-spoken Tom is a golf enthusiast who shoots in the low 70s and once considered the sport as a pro career.

During the off-season, Tom is a ticket salesman for the Royals along with players Wayne Embry, Larry Staverman and Phil Rollins.

Despite his youth, Tom is well liked by his players. In fact, they were his biggest boosters when the coaching post became vacant early last season. Now, he is the leader of these troops.

OUR HOME COURT — OUR HEADQUARTERS

The Royals enter their third season of National Basketball Association play on the Cincinnati Gardens hardwood once the 1959-60 season gets underway.

A total of 30 home games will be played by the Royals on the portable Garden hardwood. Seven of these games will be televised nationally from the spacious Queen City sports palace.

Cincinnati became a member of the NBA in the fall of 1957 when the Royals moved here after 12 exciting seasons in Rochester, New York. Could it talk, the thump-sounding basketball floor in the Gardens might reveal many thrilling pro basketball moments despite only two seasons here.

Already, the Royals have found the road to success in the NBA a long and rocky one since planting themselves in Cincinnati. The first season found them winning 33 games and losing 39. Last winter, they won 19 games while losing 53. The Royals still, however, look forward to the day the Gardens can host a Western Division titlist and later an NBA champion!

It was in July, 1946 that the Cincinnati Garden corporation proposed and set about constructing a winter sports area. Less than three years later, on Feb. 22, 1949 to be exact, the Garden opened its doors to the public.

The large Gardens plant has been a boon to the Queen City. Once a conservative community, Cincinnatians have witnessed ice shows, boxing, wrestling, food shows, tennis matches, religious meetings, sports shows and hockey besides pro basketball in the Garden.

Residents from this city of seven hills, sprawled along the banks of the Ohio River, are quickly accepting the play-for-pay brand of basketball as a leading sports activity.

One of the most modern sports arenas in the nation, the Garden doesn't claim a single seat with poor visibility to the floor. Forty ton trusses, 30 feet deep and 240 feet long, eliminate the use of view-hampering poles.

Not one of the more than 14,000 fans flocking the Gardens on one night need be a mountain climber to get to the farthest seat. There are no balconies in the building. Main roof of the Garden is high enough to shelter a 10-story apartment building over the center floor.

President of the Garden corporation is Tom Wood. Executive vice president is Tom Grace and Alex Sinclair is general manager.
